VAWTER NOT A CANDIDATE

Southern Oregon Banker Does Not Aspire

Question of Marion County's Position Enters into Approaching Political Contest

(John Henry Stevenson in Portland Telegram, Sept. 15.)

William Ira Vawter, who has all along been regarded as Southern Oregon's candidate for congress on the Republican ticket at the forthcoming election, will not enter the primaries next April, according to the latest information from up the valley. The story goes that the Southern Oregon banker has made up his mind that this is not the opportune time to enter the race and deplete his gold reserve to the extent that the direct primaries will demand.

The withdrawal of Vawter throws the congressional mixup into a different phase. Now that he is out, the question arises, who will get the support of Binger Hermann in that domain? Hermann has a following in the south, there's no doubt. As a Southern Oregon man, Vawter was entitled to the congressman's support, but now conditions have changed.

As the congressional lineup looks now, there are, it seems but three men to be seriously considered. One is Charles B. Moores, of Marion county; Walter L. Toole, of the same place, and Samuel Bruce Huston, of Washington county. Which of the three is the strongest is something all three would like to know. One thing is in Huston's favor, and that is the fact of Moores and Toole both being from the same county, where the sovereigns of votes are divided. Whether the tale of the house divided against itself will work out here, remains to be seen.

But it is, of course, divided, while Huston has Washington county all to himself, and such other sub-divisions of the commonwealth as he is able to whip into line. Linn county, one of the political hotbeds of the valley, is up in the air. It hasn't lined up for any one man, as yet, but is waiting to see in which direction the feline will mount the atmosphere. That Linn can play an important part in the drama is certain, if she wants to. Linn might conscript Binger Hermann into the service. The sons of Linn got him his nomination, once upon a time, and they might ask Binger to line up his cohorts for their man, in consideration of services rendered, when the felicitous statesman was in politics himself. Whether he has lost his grip utterly, is a question, but it is not thought to be improbable that he could wield some influence for a given man, if he so pleased him.

Marion has another congressional candidate in the person of W. H. Hawley, but his chances are looked upon as meagre. He has some following in Salem, where he is known as a school-teacher, and quite a following at his old home in Benton county, but hardly enough it would seem, to batter down the opposition.

Isaac Hanna Bingham, of Lane, has been mentioned for congress, but it is understood that he will stay at home, unperturbed by the tides of the primaries. It is quite likely that he will be content to try for the state senate from Lane, instead.

That Huston will have considerable opposition on account of his prior Democratic tenets there is little doubt, and with this fact in view, along with the division in Marion county and the up-in-the-air shape of things generally, there may be a good opening for a dark horse to trot into the course before the votes are counted.

DIED.

HOWARD.—At the home of his mother-in-law, Mrs. Fidelia A. Everett, on Oak street, Salem, Oregon, September 14, 1905, at 3 o'clock p. m., Dr. E. J. Howard, of pneumonia, aged about 45 years.

The deceased came with his family from Iowa to this state about two years ago, and has been looking for a location ever since.

He leaves a wife and two daughters, aged 15 and 17 years, respectively. He was a member, in high standing, of the Masonic and Workmen lodges. The remains were taken to Rigdon's undertaking parlors for embalming, and they will be shipped back to Iowa for interment today.

Worth the Price.

J. H. Pearson will occupy quarters in the city jail for two days and a half, for begging money, with which he bought booze and got on a glorious drunk.
